TO SHIPPOWERS, MERCHANTS, CAPTAINS OF VESSELS, MARINE AGENTS, AND GENTLE-MEN CONNECTED WITH THE SHIPPING IN-TERESTS OF THE COLONY GENERALLY.
FREDERICK KOSTEN begs to inform that his attention will be most thoroughly drawn to the immediate supply of navigational articles of the following description:
NAMES:—The most choice Mess Pork that ever the colony could produce, together with Ox Tongues, smoked or pickled, Lard, Bacon, Ham, German Sausages, &c., &c., which F. K. will warrant to keep sound for any time in any climate, and in such convenient packages as may be best suited for storage, and of such moderate charges, that the most economical purchaser would not be hesitant to accept of.
F. K. further returns most respectful thanks to his numerous friends, customers, and the public in general, for their very liberal patronage and support, and feels happy to inform them, that from the very large supply of fresh pork which he has been able to command, he is determined to reduce his charges throughout for fresh provisions to the lowest remunerating prices. 8760

BARQUE SIR EDWARD PAG

WATERBURY INSTITUTE.—If a pan of water be placed within six inches on either side of the stem of a young pumpkin or vegetable marrow, it will in the course of the night approach it, and will be found in the morning with one of its leaves floating on the water. This experiment may be continued nightly, until the plant begins to fruit. If a prop be placed within six inches of a young convolvulus or scarlet runner, it will find it although the prop be shifted daily. If after it has twined some distance up the prop, it be unwound and wound in the opposite direction, it will return to its original position or die in the attempt; yet notwithstanding, if two of these plants grow near each other, and have no stake around which they can twine, one of them will alter the direction of its spiral, and they will twine round each other. Duhamel placed some kidney beans in a cylinder of moist earth, after a short time they began to germinate, of course sending the plume upwards to the light and the root down into the soil. After a few days the cylinder was turned one-fourth round, and again and again this was repeated, until an entire revolution of the cylinder had been completed. The beans were then taken out of the earth, and it was found that both the plume and radicle had bent to accommodate themselves to every revolution, and the one in its effort to ascend perpendicularly, and the other to descend, had formed a perfect spiral. But although the natural tendency of the roots is downwards, of course sending the plume upwards to the light, and the root down into the soil, it is not always so. The roots will ascend to reach it.—Farmer's Magazine.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

A NOTHER SURPRISING CURE!

Campbelltown, April 11, 1848.
To Mr. Harpiss.
Sir—I feel it a duty incumbent on me, to let the community at large know the Wonderful Cure that has been performed on me by the effects of Holloway's Medicine. I have, for the last six months, been afflicted with the liver complaint, and at last was compelled to take to my bed in a very low state, so low that I did not think I would ever rise in health again. After trying medical aid, and finding no relief, I was advised by Mr. William Burrell to try the Medicine aforementioned, which I did, and after one or two doses of Holloway's Pills, and rubbing in the Ointment, I found great relief, and by strictly following the rules laid down by Mr. Holloway, and using his Pills and Ointment for six weeks, I had myself in the enjoyment of as good health as ever I possessed in my life. The truth of this statement is incontestable, as there is not one of my neighbours but could testify the same.—I remain, &c.,
ROBERT ELKINS,
Blacksmith, Campbelltown.

This Wonderful Medicine can be recommended with the greatest confidence for any of the following Diseases:—

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY, JULY 31.

The Peers present were: The Lord Chancellor, Lord Lyndhurst, Lord Brougham, and Lord Campbell.

JUDGMENT.

THE DUKES OF BRUNSWICK V. THE KING OF HANOVER.

The arguments in this appeal, which has already been before the House nearly the whole of three days, were again now resumed, and judgment given without counsel on behalf of the respondent being called upon to address their Lordships.

The case is one of considerable importance, and the subject-matter of the facts will doubtless be pursued with much interest.

The appeal was against an order of the Master of the Rolls, the effect of which was to dismiss a bill which had been filed by the Duke of Brunswick against the King of Hanover, under the circumstances below detailed, without which detail the matter would not be understood.

The bill was filed by Charles Frederick William Augustus, formerly the reigning Duke of Brunswick, against the King of Hanover, who was used by the name of His Royal Highness Ernest Augustus, Duke of Cumberland and Teviotdale in Great Britain, and Earl of Armagh, in Ireland. The bill prayed that it might be decreed, that the said instrument dated the 6th of February and the 14th of March, 1833, and the appointment of His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge as guardian of the fortune and property of the plaintiff, thereby purported to be made, and of the persons purported to be appointed administrators and managers under him, and the subsequent appointment of the defendant as such guardian, were void, and that the defendant was liable to account to the plaintiff for the personal estate and other property received by him since his appointment as guardian by virtue of the said instrument, including therein the estate and effects, &c., paid or accounted for to the defendant by the Duke of Cambridge, and that such account might be accordingly taken. The bill stated, that in the year 1830 the plaintiff, the reigning Duke of Brunswick, and was in his private character or capacity possessed of real and personal property in Brunswick, and in England, France, and elsewhere in Europe, to a very considerable amount; that the Duke of Brunswick bordered on the kingdom of Hanover, and that in the month of September, 1830, his late Majesty, King William IV., was King of Hanover, and his Royal Highness Adolphus Frederick, Duke of Cambridge, was Viceroy of Hanover, acting under the authority of his late Majesty King William IV. That pending a revolutionary movement in Brunswick, a decree of the Government of Hanover was made on the 2nd of December, 1830, whereby the plaintiff's brother, William, Duke of Brunswick, was invited to take on himself provisionally the government of the duchy, and that in February, 1831, King William IV., and William Duke of Brunswick, claiming to be the legitimate agents of the plaintiff, caused to be published a declaration, whereby they purported to dethrone the plaintiff from the throne of the duchy, and declared that the throne had passed to Duke William; and that after this declaration was made it was signed by their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Cumberland (the present defendant), the Duke of Cambridge, and the Duke of Sussex; and that in pursuance of the declaration William Duke of Brunswick took upon himself the government of the duchy, and he had ever since exercised the rights, powers, and authorities of Sovereign Duke of Brunswick. The bill then proceeded to state, that early in the year 1833 an instrument in writing, dated the 6th of February and the 14th of March in that year, signed by King William IV., and by William Duke of Brunswick, was promulgated by them. The Duke of Cambridge, though the absolute and unqualified guardian of the plaintiff's fortune and property, took possession of the real estates to which he was entitled in his private capacity as Brunswick, and took possession of such parts of the plaintiff's property in Brunswick and elsewhere of a personal nature, as he could discover, to the amount of several hundred thousand pounds; in the whole; that he sold and converted several parts thereof into money, and made certain payments on account of the plaintiff and of his property; but that after allowing for such payments there remained in his hands a very large surplus unaccounted for; that King William IV. died on the 28th (20th) of June, 1837, and thereupon the present defendant became King of Hanover, and the Duke of Cambridge having resigned his appointment of guardian by some instrument in writing, to which the defendant was a party, and which was signed by him and by William Duke of Brunswick, the defendant was purported to be appointed guardian of the plaintiff, and of his fortune and property, in the place of the Duke of Cambridge, and with all the same powers and authorities as had been purported to be conferred on the Duke of Cambridge; that the Duke of Cambridge accounted for his receipts and payments to the defendant, and paid him the balance; and that the defendant took possession of the plaintiff's property, and had received large sums of money on account thereof, and had therewith made some payments on account of the plaintiff; but that a very large balance or surplus, to the amount of several hundred thousand pounds, remained due from the defendant to the plaintiff on account thereof; and that the defendant refused to account. The bill charged, that the instrument in writing, dated the 6th of February and the 14th of March, 1833, and the appointment of the Duke of Cambridge as guardian, and the appointment of the defendant as guardian, were wholly invalid, according to the laws of Brunswick, Hanover, and Great Britain; but that under colour thereof the Duke of Cambridge and the defendant respectively took possession of the plaintiff's property on his behalf, and not adversely; that by the law of England such appointments of guardians, and all the rights thereby purported to be given, are void, even if the same were valid by the law of Brunswick; and that if the same were valid at the time when they were issued, having regard to the circumstances and situation of the plaintiff at that time, there was now nothing in the circumstances or conduct or state of mind of the plaintiff to deprive him from the full right and power of enjoyment and disposition of his property. There was a charge that the receipts and payments by the Duke of Cambridge and the defendant respectively on account of the plaintiff, and the management of his property, constituted a mutual account, with items as well on the debit as on the credit side thereof; that such account was still open and running, and was of an intricate and complex nature, and could only be taken into a court of equity. The defendant demurred to this bill on the ground of want of jurisdiction, and the following were among the principal propositions advanced on behalf of the defendant:—First, he was by the bill admitted to be King of Hanover, a Sovereign Prince, recognised by the Crown of England; as a Sovereign Prince his person was inviolable, and he was not liable to be sued in any court. Second, the inviolability of a Sovereign Prince was not confined to his own dominions, but extended to him everywhere; so that though a King might be personally in a foreign kingdom, yet he was to be judged in law a King there; that his inviolability was not affected by his being temporarily resident in a foreign kingdom, even if he was a subject of such kingdom, but that he still retained his character of independent Sovereign Prince; that the defendant was not the less a Sovereign Prince, and not the less exempt from being sued in any court here, merely because he was a subject of the Queen and a Peer of the realm of England. That even if the defendant should be held liable to be sued for some things in this country, he ought not to be held liable to be sued in respect of the particular subject-matter of this suit, which was alleged to be matter of state and not matter of foreign jurisdiction; and finally, it was contended, that even if the defendant should be held liable to be sued here, and if the subject-matter of the suit should be held to be matter of foreign jurisdiction, yet that it was not matter subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery, but was matter which must be deemed to be subject to the jurisdiction of some court of special and peculiar jurisdiction, such as in this country were proceedings arising in lunacy, bankruptcy, and various other matters, which, although proper subjects of foreign jurisdiction, could only be adjudicated upon in courts specially appointed for the purpose. On the other hand, the following are amongst the principal propositions advanced in support of the bill on behalf of the plaintiff:—First, it was said that this ought to be considered as an ordinary suit between subject and subject. The plaintiff and the defendant were lineal descendants of the Princess Sophia, Electress and Duchess Dowager of Hanover, and as such were to all intents and purposes to be deemed natural born subjects of this realm. The plaintiff was domiciled here. The defendant was born here, was an English peer, and had taken the oath of allegiance. Secondly, that no English subject could withdraw from his allegiance and subjection to the law of the land. His becoming a sovereign prince of another country could make no difference in this respect; he remained an English subject, and was bound to obey the laws of England. Thirdly, the law of England afforded no authority for the proposition that sovereign princes resident here might not be sued in the courts here, and there were dicta to the contrary. Fourthly, the case of Calvin's case was cited, in which it was said that if a King of a foreign nation came into England by leave of the King of this realm (as ought to be) in this case he shall sue and be sued by the name of a King; and it was reported that in the case of De la Torre v. Bernales, Sir John Leach stated it to be his opinion that sovereigns could both sue and be sued in this country. In support of this position reference was made to proceedings in which John Balliol, King of Scotland, was summoned to answer charges made against him in the court of Edward I., King of England, and to proceedings in which Edward I., King of England, was summoned to answer charges made against him in the court of Philip le Bel, King of France, at Paris. For the defendant these cases were attempted to be distinguished from the present on the ground that the proceedings were respectively adopted in virtue of and for the purpose of enforcing the superiority which Edward I. claimed to have over the kingdom of Scotland, and the superiority which the King of France had over the province of Guienne, which Edward I. had in fealty to him. Fourthly, liability to the suit, it was said, did not necessarily involve liability to coercion; the defendant, as an English peer, was by privilege protected from personal coercion; and even if a sovereign prince, without such privilege, was a defendant here, this Court had no power so to modify its process as at the same time to do justice to the plaintiff, and have due regard to the person and dignity of the defendant. Fifthly, it was said that the law of nations, the general law, and the common interests of all mankind were that justice should be done all over the world. The right of a suitor here was not to be impeded by the assertion of an unrecognised privilege in any person against whom he had a legal demand. Sixthly, the Queen of England was liable to be sued in a proper form—a form not applicable to a foreign sovereign; but if a foreign sovereign were not liable to be sued here at all, he would be placed in a better situation than our own sovereign, which, it was said, would be absurd. The Master of the Rolls, after having stated the nature of the case and the points of argument, said, "The question which I have had to consider is, whether, under the circumstances of this case, and as against a Sovereign Prince who is a subject of the Queen of England, this Court has the jurisdiction which is attributed to it by this bill; and I am of opinion that the alleged acts and transactions of the defendant, under colour or under the authority of the instrument in question, are not acts and transactions in respect of which the defendant is liable to be sued in this court, or in respect of which the Court has any jurisdiction over him. The demurrer was thus allowed. Against the order it was that the present appeal had been made.

Mr. Rolt and Mr. Hewitfield addressed the House on behalf of the appellant; and at the termination thereof.

The House intimated that they saw no necessity for calling on the learned Counsel (Mr. G. Turner and Mr. Rimale) to offer any arguments on the part of the respondent. The matter was quite clear and distinct. The pleadings had set forth certain transactions which were alleged to have taken place in a foreign country and between foreign Sovereigns. With such transactions between foreign Sovereigns, and abroad, too, there was no doubt but that they did not fall within the jurisdiction of the courts of this country. The decision of the Master of the Rolls was therefore correct in allowing the demurrer. The order of the Court below must therefore be affirmed.

The order of the Court below was accordingly affirmed. The noble and learned Lords each offered his opinion in judgment, of which the above may be taken as the substance and effect.

THE COLONIZATION DEBATE.

(From the Morning Chronicle, July 27.)

AMID the chaos of conflicting opinions, and vague speculations, and impracticable proposals with which Parliament has been occupied and distracted during the greater part of the present session, it is very satisfactory to see for once a really great subject worthily treated, and an important practical reform distinctly pointed out by a shrewd and able statesman. On Tuesday night, Sir William Molesworth amply redeemed the fault which he had previously committed in allowing another motion to take precedence of that on Colonial Government; and, in spite of the disadvantages resulting from the peculiar circumstances of the time, and in spite of the difficulties attending the subject, he succeeded in making a very strong, and we hope, lasting, impression on the House of Commons. If we have a fault to find with his speech, it is, perhaps, that it goes too much into details which hearers and readers are apt to think tedious, and hardly puts forward with sufficient prominence the great principles which these details illustrate, and from whence they proceed by a strict logical necessity. The result must be, we fear, that this elaborate and comprehensive summary of the Colonial question, though most valuable as a magazine of facts and arguments, will not, probably, produce much immediate effect. The question is, however, making its way into the minds of the thoughtful few, and a conviction is gradually spreading from them, downwards, that colonial government is a subject to which reformatory legislation ought to be immediately directed. We think, therefore, that Sir William Molesworth may have done more service to the cause by the course which he has adopted, than he could have done by a more brilliant and popular oratorical effort. We will not attempt to follow him through the long array of facts and figures by which he established his several propositions; but so well were they arranged, and so thoroughly compressed, that no abstract could do justice to their force and importance. In fact, Sir William, from his exposition of the case with a kind of wonder that nobody had said all this before, and that the British nation can have so long neglected the existence of a system such as the one which he denounces.

We cannot too often repeat (what Mr. Hawes, like other defenders of that system, perseveres in ignoring) that the political part of the question raised by Sir William Molesworth is not one, necessarily or primarily, about the merits of particular constitutional forms, still less is it one between monarchy and democracy. Of course, as Englishmen, we wish to see representative institutions made the basis of government in every country inhabited by our countrymen; but we can easily conceive cases, among our colonial possessions, where such a representative government may be temporarily necessary. At all events that is not the point. The question is between government on the spot, and government at a distance—between government by colonists, and government by strangers. To those who have not studied the theory of our colonial government, it is, as we have before said, a matter of melancholy astonishment that its practical operation is so unsatisfactory; but when they have once made themselves acquainted with that theory, they only wonder that the effects are not ten times worse. It may be shortly designated as the uncontrolled despotism of a few men. To those who are not conversant with the subject, it is a matter of surprise that the despotism is so uncontrolled, except by that consciousness of complete ignorance which occasionally makes him hand over, in despair, his power to a governor or a commander-in-chief, and then they become uncontrolled. Either way the despotism is far away from those of his subjects, whose knowledge of them is imperfect, whose interests are distinct from theirs, whose opinion of them is derogatory—who has other masters to please, other objects to pursue, other prizes to seek after than those with which they are connected—and who, therefore, as one might expect, in nine cases out of ten, is, ex officio, in a position of chronic and bitter hostility with those among them who are not bound to him by hopes of place and power. As to Parliamentary control, Sir William was in no part of his speech more happy than where he described the all but inaccessible sources from which those who take an interest in colonial subjects have to procure their materials, and pointed out the impossibility of arriving at the truth, except at an expense of labour and time such as few can afford. Few, therefore, undertake the task, and where they do, and have mastered any part of the subject, they find that it is next to impossible to make a House for a colonial question; so that when a case has been prepared, it is no unusual to hear it.

Upon the economical part of the subject, Sir William Molesworth had it all his own way. Self-government means, or involves, self-support, foreign administration, foreign pay. If we manage the business of the colonists, it is right that we should incur the expense of the mismanagement; if we appoint their officers, it is right that we should defray their salaries; if we keep them disaffected, we must of course pay for preserving their allegiance by force. The questions which we have now to ask ourselves, are these:—Is our system of Colonial government worth our support? What do we get by it? Extended commerce? Yes—at the cost of nine shillings in direct expenditure for every pound sterling of our exports. The prestige of extended sway? That is impaired, if not lost, by the universal disaffection of those who live under it. Fields for emigration? More than half our emigrants go to a foreign land, and the value of our own dependencies, for that purpose, is diminished, instead of being augmented, by our control, as it is at present exercised. But we can show not only by reasoning but by examples, that every one of these advantages may be enjoyed without costing us a farthing—except for the parchment of an Act of Parliament. It is our present system of mischievous and costly interference which hampers the loss of them all, and makes it almost a matter of doubt whether we should not gain by losing them. The strong point of Sir William's case is, that we do not get the advantages we pay for. Other nations have misgoverned their colonies—have retarded their prosperity and alienated their affections; but, at any rate, they have got something out of them—they have made them a source of wealth, and furnished on their ruins. But it was reserved for us to pay tribute to our colonies, and to get nothing from them, while, at the same time we appear in their eyes, and in the eyes of the world, to be keeping them, against their will, for our own purposes and interests.

The feeling with which we have read Mr. Hawes's speech is chiefly one of sympathy and compassion, at seeing an able and honourable man in such a thoroughly false position. He would have sacrificed half his reputation to have been allowed to hold a brief on the other side. We are not surprised that he spoke badly; the old arguments—the converse arguments—must have been rising in his mind at every moment, and confusing his recollection of the new "instructions." But it was most injudicious for him to take upon his shoulders the defence of the whole colonial system. He might have said a good deal very plausibly, about the difficulty of making rapid and extensive alteration, or he might have defended the colonies which we hold as military posts, and on which we think Sir William Molesworth was unfairly hard—or he might have frankly declared his concurrence in the spirit of the resolutions, and promised to promote their practical operation; but he absolutely came out as the champion of Downing-street, was prepared to break a lance with the "old American system," made himself merry with the "pet colony" of South Australia and its "amateur administration," justified its recovery under the wing of the Colonial Office (as if Sir William Molesworth had ever thought of advocating amateur administrations), read or three "dispassionate dispatches" of Lord Grey in favour of representative government, and exultingly asked the House whether they called that nothing—and, above all, "could not imagine what clear or intelligible cause existed for the disavowal into which the office had fallen in the opinion of his honourable friends behind him!" This last sentence is really too good; as we write it, we feel our compassion going out at our finger's ends, and nothing but want of space, and a sense of our own inability to do justice to so tempting a subject, induces us to forbear. Oh! for one hour of Charles Buller quasi ad, free from the trammels of office, in his clearness as of old. How he would have revelled in such an opportunity for the exercise of his peculiar powers as that afforded by the reply to Mr. Hawes! But the Fate has otherwise ordained, and we can only say to him, in sorrow, "Pende-toi, brave Crillon—nous avons combattu à Arques, et tu n'y étais pas."

SIR R. PEEL'S SPEECH ON THE COLONIES.

(From the Times, July 1.)

There is—at least, there was a few months back—an opinion abroad, that Sir Robert Peel somehow or another, at some indefinite period, when the Whigs should have suffered the affairs of the country to fall into inextricable confusion, would rise in his place in the House of Commons with a smile of conscious satisfaction, tap the Speaker's table as he went, in the good old days of the Conservative phalanx, pull a little scheme out of the pocket of the blue frock coat, drive his adversaries from power, and set everything to rights ere Mr. Disraeli could point a sarcasm, or Lord George Bentinck make the smallest statistical effort. Things might seem to be at a dead lock, but we always had our remedy. Homer was at his fortifying work. The oracle was silent, not dumb. Peel was biding his time. Peel knew his tides and his seasons. If Sir Robert were silent, he knew better than to speak. If he spoke, and what he said did not seem very much to the purpose, an esoteric meaning, a Rabbinical sense, was attributed to his words. The wind was dead foul, and of course he must lie on and off, in the exercise of what he himself would unostentatiously term a large discretion. The designation of the "pilot that weathered the storm" belonged, perhaps, to a statesman of older and more Titanic times, but Peel was the physician that had felt the pulse. Galen might be in retirement at Tamworth shouldering his spade, and culling similes, but we knew where to find him. Our safety lay in our own breeches pocket in the shape of the foe. Given the Amorcrum quiddam, Peel would prescribe at last, and the patient's safety was secure.

Now we are beginning to entertain very serious doubts if this be so. Sir Robert's speech on the West Indian question is enough to startle a very robust faith. We are told by Moore that—

The sunflower turns on her God when he sets. The same look which the turned when he rises. But with every disposition to imitate the example of that faithful and credulous plant, even the stanchest Peelite must, we should think, plead guilty to the slightest suspicion of scepticism as to the efficacy of any Peel potion to invigorate once more the languid limbs of the West Indian planter, or to restore the West Indian mortgagee to his former health. Time was when Sir Robert could speak on the affairs of the forlorn Antilles without delivering himself of a tissue of contradictions. We remember well on the evening of the 3rd of June little more than six years ago, that Sir Robert Peel, in his place in the House of Commons, said—

I have grave doubts whether our West Indian colonies, in which we have suppressed slavery together, are comparable with colonies in which slavery exists. That is the opinion of Mr. Dawson Humphreys who is for carrying the principles of free trade as far as any one.

In the same speech we find one point that had struck with peculiar force upon Sir Robert Peel's imagination. In the course of six years it has fructified. Sir Robert Peel's speech of June 29, 1848, is the best comment
